

ALBERTA WORKFORCE ESSENTIAL SKILLS

Targeted essential skills training = better health and safety, less waste and fewer errors

The Alberta Workforce Essential Skills Society (AWES) is a non-profit training organization that promotes the importance of ensuring workers have the essential skills required to engage in meaningful employment.

Research shows that essential skills training improves productivity, and workplace efficiencies. Targeted essential skills training leads to better health and safety, less waste and fewer errors.

AWES develops customized essential skills training that enables workers to apply and retain what they have learned. Ask us about our research from a recent national project proving the benefits of essential skills training. AWES would like to provide your organization with information about essential skills training and how it can benefit your company.

Why is AWES training so effective?

- We show employers how essential skills relate to their business goals and demonstrate the impact of higher levels of essential skills.
- We engage management to learn what they want to improve and why.
- We customize curriculum to meet each company's specific needs by touring the site, talking to employees and reviewing documents and tasks.
- We assess employees to predict where issues might arise.
- We understand demanding production schedules and respond to them with flexible training options.
- We have experienced instructors who have worked with hundreds of employees in multiple industries across Canada.

The result for every client is fully customized training tied to company outcomes, tasks, and procedures.

Contact Us

To learn more about AWES's training programs and how we get results, please contact:

Cindy Messaros, AWES Executive Director

cindy@awes.ca